James Harbour joined Fulbright & Jaworski LLP as a partner in its antitrust and competition practice.

Harbour served on the Federal Trade Commission since 2003. She will work from both the Washington, D.C. and New York offices of Fulbright. Prior to her service on the Commission, Harbour was an antitrust partner at a New York firm. She previously spent a decade working in the New York Attorney General's Office, including as Deputy Attorney General, where she investigated and prosecuted a variety of antitrust and consumer protection violations.

Fish & Richardson PC named Kevin E. Greene and David E.A. Jordan as patent group principals in the firm's Washington, D.C. office.

Greene will continue to focus his practice on patent prosecution in the areas of electrical engineering and physics.

Jordan will continue to focus his practice on patent opinions, due diligence, portfolio development, and patent prosecution in the fields of computer hardware and software, electrical engineering, and business methods.

Tully Rinckey PLLC of Washington, D.C. added Brandy Hood as an associate in its federal sector labor and employment law practice.

Hood will provide representation to federal employees in a wide range of employment and labor issues including termination, sexual harassment, equal pay, adverse action and Title VII claims. She has previous experience in immigration, bankruptcy, civil litigation and business transactions. Prior to joining Tully Rinckey, Hood was a judicial intern for Honorable Lance Africk at the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana and a judicial intern for the Honorable Frederick H. Wicker at the Louisiana Fifth Circuit of Appeal.

Professional Services

Reston-based Dahl-Morrow International added Margaret Burke as senior director.

With over twenty years of experience in human capital management, Burke has worked with clients in such industries as venture capital, e-commerce, communications, and government contracting, healthcare and financial services among others. Burke's practice areas in executive search include finance, information technology and security, project management, organizational development, call center and business development. In addition to her work in search, Burke has provided professional human capital management services to diverse corporate and individual clients. She has provided individual and group career coaching and counseling to professionals in the Baltimore-Washington area, as well as training in behavioral interviewing for hiring managers and advanced recruiting research techniques for corporate and third party recruiters. Burke spent five years providing vocational and rehabilitative support to individuals with disabilities and was recognized as an outstanding professional in the disability community in Montgomery County.

The Jane Goodall Institute appointed Maureen P. Smith president.

A veteran of the media industry, Smith recently led Discovery Communication's Animal Planet channel, as well as Animal Planet Media Enterprises. While at Animal Planet, Smith met and worked alongside Goodall. Together with Goodall and JGI staff, Smith and her team developed and produced documentaries to inform people around the world about JGI. Smith also personally developed Goodall's Roots & Shoots Minutes, which highlighted the efforts of Roots & Shoots groups across the globe and invited viewers to go online to learn more about the program. Smith led Animal Planet to record revenues and profits and helped grow the business by using technology to create new ways of engaging people of all ages. She transformed animalplanet.com from a simple promotional website into a money-making source for animal-centric entertainment, information and games, while also leading her team to the acquisition of Jetfinder.com. During her tenure, Smith worked closely with the Smithsonian National Zoo, the National Aquarium in Baltimore and dozens of other organizations on various conservation awareness and fundraising projects.
